Searching for articles in specific journals

Relevant journals can be found in print and are spread throughout many of the Miller Library's databases. If you are searching for a specific journal, follow these steps:

1. Visit JAKE.
2. Type in the title of the journal you are looking for & search.
3. Find your journal in the list.
4. Under the title, look for "full text available in ____ databases".
5. If the full text is available, click on Complete Details. (If there are 0 databases, you will not be able to access full text online and will have to use Interlibrary Loan or alternate means to find the article).
6. The far right column will list the dates where full text is available. Find the date(s) you need and take note of which resources carry that date.
7. Compare the resources to the Miller Library Databases page.
8. If the resource is listed on the Miller Library's Databases page, click on the database name and follow the instructions within the database for searching specific titles. If the resource is not listed on the Databases page, the Library does not subscribe to the resource & you will need to use Interlibrary Loan for retrieval.
